Volunteers Complete 61st Year Publishing Greenbelt's Newspaper

Small, yes. Amateurish — well that's a matter of opinion. Old-fashioned — sure, if by that is meant dedication to facts, an avoidance of sensationalism, and a certain concern for the feelings of our citizens in their times of trouble. Sometimes warmly supported and sometimes vehemently attacked, but always central to the life of the community. We're talking, of course, about the Greenbelt News Review, which is now completing its 61st year of continuous publication.

The paper is unique — the longest-running, all-volunteer, co-operative weekly newspaper in the United States — and has been featured in numerous books and television programs, as well as graduate theses and other student papers on Greenbelt, planned towns, and the cooperative movement. Some of these researchers have focused on the paper's four-year, David-and-Goliath struggle against a $2,000,000 libel suit in which the paper was finally vindicated by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1970. The News Review decision struck a blow for freedom of the press, and the case is still studied and quoted as a significant legal precedent.

In a town of many co-ops, the News Review is the oldest.

Originally a letter-sized mimeographed publication consisting of 16 pages, then titled the Greenbelt Cooperator, the paper began publication on November 24, 1937 — six weeks after the first families had occupied their homes.

For those who have wondered how the paper gets out each week, the staff is largely volunteer (or, at least, minimally paid with member dividends) and, in the Greenbelt tradition, organized as a labor co-operative. The paper is unconnected with the city government, the other co-operatives in the city, or with Greenbelt Homes, Inc. The paper gratefully accepts support from any segment of the community — from the city in the form of advertising and in housing for its operation; the Co-op grocery and GHI in corporate ads; and from the citizens when the financial pinch gets too tight. However, it is essentially self-supporting.

The paper lives by its advertising revenues, which cover all normal operations.

History

The early pioneers recognized the immediate need for a news medium to keep people informed of local events and to provide a forum for the exchange of views. They laid down the principles that still guide the actions of the present News Review — a non-partisan, non-profit cooperative endeavor, whose aims are to print the news accurately and fairly and to respect the Greenbelt "good neighbor" philosophy of life.

Office Space

In January 1938 the federal government (which owned Greenbelt at that time) made space available at the town commercial center, free of cost, and also loaned much-needed furniture, typewriters (we still have some) and office equipment. The paper moved its office five times before coming to rest in the present quarters in the newly renovated Community Center.

With the withdrawal of the federal government from town,

Referendum Set

The City Council voted at its regular meeting on November 23 to hold the referendum on the annexation of Parkside on March 9, 1999.

Greenbelt Theater's Opening Described in 1938 Review

by Mary Linstrom

(Editor's Note: Mary Linstrom, a former president of the Greenbelt Museum, has lived in Greenbelt for almost 50 years.)

The Greenbelt Theater dates back almost to the city's founding in 1937, and the outcry caused by the current threat to its continued existence reflects the fact that the theater was part of the original vision of the commercial center of Greenbelt, one of the first planned shopping centers in the United States. In the original sketch of the commercial center, as drawn up by the Farm Security Administration, the theater is clearly designated.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture release, "Farm Security Administration announces Greenbelt Rentals," of September 2, 1937, states: "The commercial center, which will provide for all the town's usual needs, contains a food store, a drug store, a general merchandise store, a restaurant, a barber shop and beauty parlor, a service garage, bus station and filling station, a laundry agency, a motion picture theater, offices for doctors, dentists and other professional persons and Administration offices."

The theater and the other commercial enterprises were run on a profit-sharing basis, with sale of stock to Greenbelt residents. Before the formal opening of the theater, Greenbelters had a chance to preview it and to vote on its operation at a mass meeting. An article in the Washington News on September 7, 1938, bore the headline: "Leave Movies Alone, Greenbelters Warn After Preview." The writer stated, "At a mass meeting following a special preview of Greenbelt's new air-conditioned theater last night, 600 citizens voted 'no censorship' of films."

Opening Day

The big day of the formal opening arrived on September 21, 1938. All the Washington papers (in those days there were more than the present two) took notice of the event. The Washington Herald, in characteristic flamboyant style, could not refrain from taking its usual dig at the town, which was then controversial and seen by some as "socialistic." Their detailed account gives a great picture of the opening, and the rest of this article quotes it in full.

"Mayor Louis Bessemer at Theater Opening

"Varina Craig, High School Senior, Shows Greenbelt Executive to His Seat

"'Modern Eden' States Own Premiere in Cooperative Picture House

"by Pat Frank

"Movies came to Greenbelt, the modern Eden, last night, for the first time.

First face flashed on the screen of the modernistic Greenbelt Theater, first cooperative, community-owned theater in the country, was that of Adolf Hitler — he brought down the house.

"Hiss, Then Laugh

"Five hundred internationally-minded Greenbelt youngsters filled most of the 592 seats for the grand opening. They came to see Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Broadway." When they saw Hitler staring at them out of the newsreel, they began to hoot and howl.

"Five rows of Boy Scouts, who were admitted free and sat up front, made the most noise. They saw General Goering goose-stepping, took it as comedy relief, and laughs drowned out the hisses.

Greenbelt's Utopian Theater is financed from a trust fund of the late Edward S. Filene, Boston merchant, for cooperatively-owned community enterprises. Eventually, Greenbeltians will own all the stock

Sister City Out-blooms, Out-renovates Greenbelt

by James Giese

Greenbelt can be proud of what has been accomplished by improving its streetscapes with flower beds and by renovating its commercial center, Roosevelt Center — although more work is still to be done. However, Greenbelt has been out-flowered and out-renovated by its sister city, Greendale, Wisconsin. Greendale has recently accomplished this as a result of its special angel or benefactor, Roy Riemen of Riemen Publishing Co.

This Wisconsin planned community built under the Roosevelt New Deal Administration has a T street intersection with the village hall at the top of the T looking down the shopping street. A long building housed the original stores for the community. The opposite side of the street was empty, but planned for future expansion of the commercial center.

Although a variety of efforts were made to revitalize the commercial center, business dwindled, much of it lost to a major regional shopping center, South Ridge, located on the edge of the village. When Riemen bought the buildings, most of the stores were empty.

While Riemen's efforts to revitalize the village center have been called philanthropic, he says that there was a business reason for doing so. His folksy magazines, 10 publications in all, appeal to older persons. The average age of the publishing company's 15 million subscribers is 57. Many of them came to visit the publishing's company headquarters and to chat with the people writing the articles and columns. Too many, in fact. They were interfering with work production, so visitors had to be banned. However, that was not good for public relations.

Solution

The solution was for Riemen to buy the commercial center, renovate it, upgrade its appearance, and build a second row of stores across the street in the same architectural style. The leading facility in the new building is a visitors' center for Riemen Publishing Co. which is averaging 200 visitors a day.

Now, all but one store site is filled. The new shops are specialty shops that do not compete with the retailers at the mall. One shop, for example, is a house of dolls, featuring collectible dolls, another a specialty coffee shop. Under construction is a renovated restaurant at which visitors can eat, to replace Eleanor's Restaurant (named after Eleanor Roosevelt).

To keep memories of the town's connection to Mrs. Roosevelt

It's Up to You

This week's headline recognizes the completion of the Greenbelt News Review's 61st year of publication. In the article we boast that we are the oldest weekly publication produced by an all volunteer staff. It's a record that we are proud of. It's a record which the community can be proud of, because it is the members of the community who produce this community paper.

How long can we continue to keep setting a record? That, too, depends on the members of this community, and particularly on you. The Greenbelt News Review can not survive without an extraordinary amount of work being done day in and day out by the members of its staff.

We need more help. We need more volunteers. Greenbelt has grown. More is happening. More reporters are needed to tell you, our readers, about what is happening. With more reporters, the work load for each one is lessened and we will have greater opportunity to provide complete coverage of community events. Being a reporter is a great opportunity to hone up on your writing skills and get to learn more about how your community works.

What if you can't or don't want to write? We want you, too. Whatever your skills and abilities are, we can find something for you to do. The jobs volunteers perform range from menial tasks to highly skilled. Want to run errands? Proof copy? Take advertisements at the ad desk? Help sell advertising? Take pictures? Do filing? Typing? Give expertise on our computer problems? Edit copy? Do layout? Help with our maintenance of business records? Come on down!

Are you involved in some city activity that is not being reported on that should be? You can help us by gathering the information we need and getting it to us. You can write it under your own byline, or let one of our reporters write it up for a story. Don't worry about spelling, grammar or good sentences. Our copy editors can take care of that. Just get us the facts.

Our editor, assistant editor and news editor, in particular, can use some help. They have been at their jobs almost, it seems to them, since time immemorial, and would love to have some of their weekly chores taken over by others.

The Greenbelt News Review is your primary source as to what is happening in this town. It can only do so if everyone who can pitches in to help. We're nice, friendly people and your neighbors. Please come join us.

To volunteer or for information, call our office and leave a message, 301-474-4131, or our editor, Mary Lou Williamson, 301-441-2662, or come down to our offices at the Greenbelt Community Center on Monday or Tuesday evenings or Monday or Tuesday afternoons.

Letters to the Editor

Teeny Tiny?

Now just a teeny tiny minute.

When I was house hunting, I decided I wanted to live in the city of Greenbelt. I think I bought one of those teeny tiny houses the Westchester Park writer alluded to in the October 29 issue of the News Review.

My teeny tiny house has four upstairs closets. Since they are in a teeny tiny house, I suppose they are teeny tiny closets. However, those teeny tiny closets all have solid wood panel doors and the floors are solid oak, tongue-in-groove floors as is all the upstairs flooring. After 60 years, oak acquires a lovely patina of age — a deep rich honey color. My teeny tiny house also has a slate roof and a brick fire wall between my house and the townhouse beside mine. Doors, floors and roofs like this are features that are found on a teeny, teeny, teeny tiny number of homes of recent construction.

Although I do not have a walk-in closet, after I park my car in the garage (and yes, it is a teeny tiny garage), I can walk to the grocery store, the health and fitness center, the library, the lake, the museum, the Community Center, the doctor, the dentist, the lawyer, the post office, the theater and assorted other retail establishments. Thanks to Rexford Tugwell's planning, I can do this on the interior walkways and the sidewalk underpasses. I do not have to cross a city street or a highway.

One size does not fit all. In Greenbelt we have a wide variety of housing choices in all shapes and sizes. And for about 1,600 families in the city of Greenbelt, teeny tiny is just right.

Fit Right In

Last Sunday afternoon Janet Parker and I strolled along the outer perimeter path in Greenbelt Park. We parked our car at the top of Crest Park Drive in Parkside, the enclave that would like to join us in the City of Greenbelt.

On the way to the park we couldn't help but notice that the streets and lawns were litter-free. The lawns were lush and green and there was no sign of erosion or bare soil. We met a friendly young man who was splitting wood for his fireplace. We introduced ourselves and learned that the residents had the old time Greenbelt spirit. They had banded together for community projects such as helping some residents neaten up their premises and to construct a gently sloping path down into the park. This means that they must have meetings and discussions, perhaps like in the old days when Greenbelt was cast off from the federal system by Congress to fend for itself.

Foot paths, meetings, cooperation, and friendliness — that is what Greenbelt stands for. We think Parkside residents would fit right in to the City of Greenbelt.

Isaac Robinson

Thanks

On behalf of the City of Greenbelt, I wish to thank the News Review for your coverage of the opening of "The Wizard of Oz" at the Old Greenbelt Theater. As you know, the City of Greenbelt is working with the Greenbelt Theater to boost interest and showcase its unique and historic movie-going experience. This re-release of "The Wizard of Oz" was our first event in this effort. By all accounts, it was a huge success.

On its opening weekend, the theater sold over six times the tickets it had sold the previous weekend. Hundreds of patrons signed up to show their interest in Friends of the Greenbelt Theater and several have already made significant contributions to the Save the Theater Fund. Due to the continued success of this showing, the theater's operator has decided to run "The Wizard of Oz" through the Thanksgiving holiday.

We credit organizations like the Greenbelt News Review for getting the word out about our efforts to save the theater and for promoting "The Wizard of Oz." We look forward to your continued support in our effort to save the historic Greenbelt Theater. Our first film festival will take place the week before Christmas. The theater will show "The Sound of Music" and "The King and I." A special event will kick off the festival, where we will invite local elected officials and the media.

Judith F. Davis, Mayor
City of Greenbelt

Cindy Shifflett Waters and Kenny Shifflett.

I cannot think of a more appropriate time than Thanksgiving to thank all of the people who have contributed to my fourth Ice Chemo treatment. I will inform you of new developments. My next treatment and scan are scheduled for Tuesday, December 1.

I want to thank my entire family for their support. Without the caring people of Greenbelt this treatment would not have been possible. Also, thanks to the staff of the Greenbelt News Review for publishing my story. Also a special thank you goes out to my son, Kenny Shifflett. I just want you to know that you are my strength. Keep up the good work. Mom and Dad are proud of you.

God Bless.

Cindy Shifflett Waters

The Greenbelt Lions Club thanks the citizens of the Greenbelt area for their support of our fall "White Cane" fund raiser. Your generosity enables us to help the blind and visually impaired. Your donations also help us to provide eye examinations and eye glasses, free of charge, to needy persons. It also assists the Lions in sending visually impaired children to summer camp, provides dogs and training to the leader dog program, and to other vision and research activities.

Also, a reminder: a box for donated eye glasses can be found in the Co-op grocery window.

Paper Late, Again

Delays in printing last week again made delivery of the News Review to Greenbelt very late on Thursday night. Ian Tuckman, the paper's circulation manager, was still able to make a few drops to carriers that night. He resumed delivery to businesses and individual carriers beginning at 7:30 p.m. Friday, when he returned home from work. Carriers were faced with not receiving their papers at the time they had set aside for delivery and had to scramble for available time later during the weekend. The News Review regrets the inconvenience to its readers.

Greenway Is Partner In Toyland Express

Combined Properties, Inc., owners of the Greenway Shopping Center, have teamed with WETA TV 26 and Sport Chevrolet in partnership with 27 other Combined Properties shopping centers in the Washington metropolitan area in a special toy drive. The purpose of the drive is to deliver toys to low income children in metropolitan day care centers. The partnership, named "Toyland Express," will distribute toys to children at Prince George's Hospital Center — Child Care Center, Cheverly, and several other childcare facilities in northern Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Greenbelt customers can drop off new, unwrapped toys in decorated toy drive boxes located in participating stores in Greenway Shopping Center through December 11. All donated toys will be distributed by WETA TV 26's "Arthur" on Tuesday, December 15.

This is the second annual "Toyland Express" toy drive hosted by Combined Properties and WETA TV 26. Last year the toy drive generated over 1,000 toys, and the sponsors hope to distribute as many toys this year. In addition, a new sponsor, Sport Chevrolet, joins the effort by providing transportation for the volunteers and toys to each day care center location.

OBITUARIES

Jacquelyn Moragne

Jacquelyn Moragne died unexpectedly on November 1 at Doctor's Community Hospital. She had had two mild strokes in the last two months.

Born in Clairton, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Moragne served four years in air force intelligence and then began a career in the foreign service. She raised her son Maurice in Bethesda and then spent tours of duty in El Salvador and Haiti.

She came to Greenbelt four years ago to provide a home for her aging father. A sister in Mitchellville could help. She liked the area, her son said, and became a member of St. Matthias Church in Lanham where she was involved in the work of the Sisters of Charity. She joined the News Review staff where she proofread occasionally and NARFE (National Association of Retired Federal Employees). This year she served as president of the Greenbelt chapter of NARFE and was sent by the group to attend the national convention in Orlando, Florida. Mrs. Moragne also attended a nephew's wedding in Jamaica recently. She loved to travel, her son said. "She did what she wanted," he said. "She went places most people only read about." After her retirement she decided to try real estate and took classes. "She was getting ready to take the state test to get her real estate brokers license. She was never the kind of person to sit back and take things easy."

A service was held at St. Matthias Church in Lanham on November 6.

Mrs. Moragne is survived by her son, Maurice Moragne, of Louisville, Kentucky.

Albert John Nuzzo, Sr. Dies

by Mary Lou Williamson

Al Nuzzo died on November 19 after two years of failing health. He was 79. He and his wife Lorraine raised their two sons and lived their lives in the 12 court of Ridge Road. Lorraine, Greenbelt pioneer, met Al through a friend in 1942 at Greenbelt Lake, where they canoed and laughed and rocked the boat, she recalled. Neither could swim. He was in the Army. Later, she joined the Navy. When he was discharged they became engaged, were married in 1946 in nearby Holy Redeemer Catholic church and returned to his home in Jersey City to live. In 1947 Greenbelt Police Chief George Panagoulis invited Nuzzo to apply for a job in the department saying "Lorraine's father wants her back here." Nuzzo stayed with the department for five years. He met Lorraine's high school chums, Donnie Wolfe and Bob Sommers, and played baseball with them, replacing Donnie as short stop. The team, the Shamrocks, won championships.

Al was a great bowler. He worked with the Boys Club, Little League and the Legion team for awhile. He loved kids. He liked to walk down to the ballfields with his own boys, finding it a quiet time for father and son to have a conversation.

He retired from C&P Telephone Co. after 25 years as field engineer. Al served as an usher for many years at St. Hugh's and he was a long time member of the American Legion, Post 136. His father-in-law had been a charter member.

This year Nuzzo was honored by the Greenbelt F.O.P., which gave him an honorary membership and this week members of the Legion brought Lorraine a Holy Bible in his honor.

Last May this newspaper published an ad paid for by their younger son A.J. He wrote a "love letter to my wonderful parents." "Somehow," Lorraine recalled, "we got two papers that day. We were each reading, when he told me turn the page." The letter reflects on the ups and downs of a son's life and is full of love. A.J. wrote: "Dad, thanks for coming (to all my games), sometimes as coach and always as a father! I feel I owe my athletic ability to you, Dad, because of the endless trips to Braden Field to practice ground balls ... 'forever.' You taught me not to give up and I practice that every day in my business life ... You never gave up on anything in your life. Your determination made a lasting impression on me."

Beside his wife Lorraine, of the home, Nuzzo is survived by his two sons, Bobby of Nevada and A.J. of Upper Marlboro. There are four grown grandchildren.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held on Monday at St. Hugh's, with interment at Gate of Heaven Cemetery. Arrangements were made by Gasch's Funeral Home.

Police Alumni Meet

The Greenbelt Police Citizens Academy Alumni will hold their second meeting on Tuesday, December 1, 6:30 p.m. at the Greenbelt Police Department. All alumni are invited to join.

Timothy J. Brink

Timothy J. "Tim" Brink, 37, of Ora Court died on Wednesday, November 18, of a pulmonary embolism.

Mr. Brink was born December 28, 1960. He served in the United States Army from 1981 to 1989. In Greenbelt he worked for the city in the Department of Public Works where he was a Crewman V on the Street Maintenance Crew. He also worked part time driving the Greenbelt Connection.

He was a member of Greenbelt American Legion, Post 136.

His survivors include parents Jane Plumber and Edward J. Brinks, Sr.; sisters, Cheryl Jackson, Cynthia Rose, Kathleen Strother, Patricia Zulueta and Bettyanne Fale; brother, Edward J. Brink, Jr.; grandmother Frances J. Plumber; 17 nieces and nephews; four great-nephews and his godmother, Ann Gruber.

A mass of Christian Burial was celebrated on Monday, November 23 at St. Mary of the Assumption Church, Upper Marlboro. Interment was in Maryland Veterans'

NEWS REVIEW

Greenbelt Homes, Inc., through its wholly owned subsidiary, Greenbelt Development Corporation, continued the federal policy of providing free office space for decades with the paper reimbursing the corporation for out-of-pocket expenses.

In February, 1996 the News Review moved to its fresh, new, above-ground space in the Greenbelt Community Center (formerly the Center School). If you haven't done so already, come visit.

Free Delivery

An important development in the history of the newspaper was the decision to deliver the Cooperator free of charge to every home in town, beginning with the issue of September 7, 1939.

The policy of free distribution remained unchanged except for an unsuccessful effort to go to a subscription basis in 1953. Successive boards of directors have considered that the most important thing is to get the paper to each household in the city.

As We Are

Although some readers may recall when the News Review had only two pages, the standard size today is 12 or 16 and may be as large as 28 pages. The deciding factor each week is the number of inches of advertising which determines the number of pages that can be paid for.

At present 11,000 free copies of the News Review are distributed weekly to homes in Greenbelt, including Springhill Lake, Greenbriar, Greenbrook, Greenwood Village, Windsor Green, Green Spring, Hunting Ridge, Belle Point and to Greenbelt office buildings and shopping centers.

New Look

In 1995 the paper joined the 90s when it moved to a cold type — computerized process at Chesapeake Printing in Beltsville. This change enabled us to return to the longer page which allows more space for stories and larger photos. We've even added green. The paper looks good, our readers tell us.

Staff

There have been 39 changes in editorship during the paper's 61 years. For the last 26 years, the position has been held by Mary Lou Williamson. There are now 75 staff members, most of whom have joined the paper as their contribution to their community. Some, like Mary Lou, have been volunteering with the paper for over 30 years.

An innovation begun 16 years ago, augmenting the staff through an agreement with the Departments of English and Journalism of the University of Maryland to accept placement of student interns, is being continued to the News Review's advantage.

Students have participated in the regular work of writing and editing copy for this paper. The program is sponsored by the Alfred M. Skolnik Memorial Fund. This fund also provides for a yearly $100 Savings Bond to be awarded to an outstanding Eleanor Roosevelt High School graduate interested in the field of writing.

Doctors Hospital Wins Recognition

Doctors Community Hospital has been recognized as the top Maryland hospital for overall care in the Washington, DC area, according to an independent study by the Health Care Information Association (HCIA). HCIA provides the evaluations in order to educate and inform consumers about the strengths of hospitals in their area. Each hospital was scored on overall hospital care, and the oncology, cardiology, and orthopedics service lines.

The study evaluated information from 36 hospitals in Maryland, Northern Virginia, and the District of Columbia for a number of factors including quality of care, patient service, and market reputation.

In addition to being the top rated Maryland hospital, Doctors Community Hospital placed first in the quality of care category for total facility care and oncology, second for cardiology, and third for orthopedics.

A number of major improvements have been made at Doctors Community Hospital in the past year, including the addition of a 24,000 square foot critical care building, and an ambulatory surgery center with four operating rooms and state-of-the-art facilities.

Several programs have been expanded including the Diabetes Care Center which provides education and support for diabetics, and the women's services center which has added a stereotactic breast biopsy machine and other high tech amenities. Plans are also underway to enhance the emergency room and other patient care areas.

Doctors Community Hospital is a not-for-profit, 250-bed acute care medical and surgical hospital serving the health care needs of the north east Maryland-Washington, D.C. area. The hospital is located at 8118 Good Luck Road in Lanham.

New Way of Looking At Greenbelt: Online

by Sandra Lange

Greenbelt and the Greenbelt Museum are the subjects of a new online Washington area tourism and leisure guide page for "Sidewalk.Com," a nationwide travel and leisure guide sponsored by the Microsoft Network, a subsidiary of Microsoft. Each "Sidewalk" site focuses on a city, and in November it included Greenbelt as a special place to visit. To access the website, go to <http://washington.sidewalk.com/GetOut>

The guide has several features on Greenbelt, including "Greenbelt's New Deal Ideals," and on the history of Greenbelt including early photographs. One page is devoted to the Greenbelt Museum, with a lively discussion of the closets, the video and the Depression era gifts for sale in the shop. Another page encourages people to visit the commercial center.

Entitled "Old Greenbelt's cooperative spirit," this page is devoted to the Roosevelt Center architecture, the Mother and Child statue, the Co-op supermarket and local restaurants, Beijing and Generous Joe's. It describes Generous Joe's as the 'self service Fill Your Belly Deli...'

The art deco Community Center is given a fair amount of coverage with descriptions of the Lenore Thomas friezes, the historic photographic collection on the walls and the New Deal Cafe in "bare-bones rooms furnished with large, round communal tables." The bulletin board at the state-of-the-art Aquatic and Fitness Center is described as providing an extensive list of activities including "...everything...going on in the active, progressive, slightly out-of-another-era but most co-operative community of Greenbelt."

All in all, "Sidewalk" is very informative, written in a sprightly manner and evidently where the technologically hip obtain their information. Those less hip still consult the very straight "What Goes On" in their local community newspaper.

Families of Mentally Ill Can Find Support

Watkins Park Hosts Festival of Lights

The Twelfth Annual Winter Festival of Lights at Watkins Regional Park, Upper Marlboro, is scheduled to start November 27 and will continue through January 3.

This year's festival promises to be exciting for both young and old alike. The theme of this holiday event is "Peace through Diversity." It will showcase a drive-through display of more than 450,000 colored lights on trees, shrubbery, buildings and roadways. The festival highlights the symbols of the different ethnic, cultural and religious groups that make up the county.

The festival is also an opportunity for visitors to make contributions of food for the less fortunate. Last year, more than 40,000 cans of food were collected and distributed to shelters and food kitchens throughout Prince George's County. The goal is to collect even more canned goods this year. Volunteers are needed to help support the event. Those who would like to help should call the Foundation's office at 301-464-6706. The sponsors are the non-profit Prince George's Community Foundation Inc., Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Prince George's County public school system. For other information about the Festival of Lights call 301-699-2545.

Shed Request Raises New Issues for GHI Policies

by Sue Krofchik

The Greenbelt Homes board of directors dug deep into their consciences on November 19 and after an hour and a half gave tacit approval for a member to build an 8x12-foot shed with a below ground basement, so long as staff architect Jay Freedman approves construction methods and location. They also approved the operating budget for 1999, including an increase in monthly co-op fees.

In the audience for the meeting were the consultants hired by GHI to present a program to members on the pros and cons about becoming a county historic district. Susan Braselton, of Preservation Partners, a firm specializing in historic preservation, and Robert Neuman of Neuman and Company, a public affairs and media strategy firm, wanted to see first-hand how GHI deals with problem solving and conducts its business. They were present also to outline plans for how they will educate the members on issues of becoming a county historic district. (See separate article.)

1999 Budget

The 1999 operating budget of $7,315,845 was unanimously adopted for second reading and final passage. Although the total operating budget will increase by some 4% over the current year, the percent increase in members' charges will be less. Fees for frame homes will go up 2.5%, masonry up 3.5%, and larger homes up 2.4%. Each member's operating charges within a particular budget class (frame, masonry, larger homes) will increase by the same percentage.

Total operating charges to members are reduced by $644,400 from other income, with each member's annual charges reduced by 1/1600th of this amount. Service income constitutes one portion of these additional funds, which include garage rentals, boat and trailer yard rental, and sale of service to GDC — Greenbelt Development Corporation — the 60 apartments in two buildings and 52 garages on Parkway that are owned and managed by GHI. Sources of "Other Income" are contract processing and leasing, interest income, and miscellaneous things such as vendor discounts, and late fees.

Shed

A member at 6 Ridge has requested permission to build a 10x12 foot wood gable roof shed with a full basement in the common area adjacent to his gardenside yard. He had already dug a hole there 88 inches deep and four feet wide, without permission, to check for tree roots. None were found in the clay soil.

The member wants the shed for storage of tools, currently in a first floor bedroom. He claimed that locating the shed in his yard would be offensive to, and block the view of, adjoining neighbors if placed within his yardline, hence his request to use the common area site. Only eight inches of the basement would be above grade and no one would see the remainder of the basement, which would be 88 inches down into the ground. He solved the problem of using the common area for location of the shed by offering to give other land within his yard to GHI for use as a common woodland area.

Use of Common Area

Isaac Robinson, co-chair of the Architecture and Environment Committee, reported the committee's approval of the location in the common area if, and only if, three conditions were met. No more than three inches of topsoil would be allowed over the roots of any tree within 10 feet of the shed and each neighbor in the court, as well as the Woodlands Committee, must approve. However, the Woodlands Committee, to which the request also was referred, recommended that no exception be granted to allow placing a shed in a common area.

The board concurred that no sheds should be located in common areas, nor did they support the changing of yard lines. Director Chuck Hess termed the latter "opening a Pandora's box" while director Betty Deitch termed it a "can of worms."

Basement

Director John Taylor, asking how the basement would be used, indicated his concern about potential problems with wetness in a basement located in clay soil. The member was adamant that the shed and basement would be used for storage, not living space. He outlined his extensive construction plans, including concrete walls with sealing and the use of 18 inches of stone surrounding the basement for drainage.

Director Bill Phelan felt the plans were "well thought out." He challenged his colleagues not to deny a shed with a basement because they might be "envious" of someone getting all that space. "If the basement is not visible, the shed should not be an issue," Phelan said. When president Keith Jahoda asked the question if anyone was opposed to a basement, no board member spoke up.

Summary

Jahoda summarized the discussion by telling the member to discuss placement of the shed within his yard with his adjoining neighbors. If he still wants the 10x12 size, slightly over the maximum 100 square feet permitted, he will need to return to the board for an exception. Otherwise the staff architect can approve an 8x12 shed with a basement within his yard if adjoining neighbors do not object. The member will fill in the 7-foot deep hole dug in the common area by the weekend.

New "Historic" Consultants Visit GHI Board Meeting

by Sue Krofchik

If last Thursday night was any example, Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) members have nothing to fear about how the decision will be made on whether or not to become a county historic district. The GHI board unexpectedly met "Fear Itself" on November 19 and found both him and his colleague to be serious about presenting an educational campaign to members that will completely and fairly present the pros and cons about becoming a county historic district.

Susan Braselton, founder of Preservation Partners, LLC, and Robert Neuman of Neuman and Company, a public affairs and media strategy firm, are consultants hired by GHI to educate members prior to their vote on whether or not to seek county historic district status. Braselton and Neuman attended the November 19 board meeting to see first-hand how the board deals with problem solving and conducts its business and also to get the board's opinion on what they consider the pros and cons on the issue.

Braselton's background includes 10 years' experience working with historic preservation, land conservation and land use planning. Neuman, who will handle the outreach portion, demonstrated his knowledge and love of history by sharing that he and his wife attended a Halloween party last month in costume, she as the "New Deal," covered in buttons with acronyms describing New Deal programs, and he as "Fear Itself."

In mid-January a letter of introduction will go to GHI members, informing them of meetings and where they can receive information. Press releases and press kits will be sent to local newspapers.

In February a condensation of the report issued by the Ad Hoc Historic District Study Committee and a document presenting questions and answers will be mailed out. These will be followed by a newsletter devoted totally to historic district issues that will be delivered to members in March. Two community forums will be held in March and April, one on a Saturday and one during an evening.

Information will also be posted on the GHI website and a slide show and video made in February 1997 during the ceremony awarding national historic landmark status will also be available.

Earlier Actions

The issue of becoming a county historic district has been actively studied for over five years by various groups. In 1993, at the request of the City of Greenbelt, a study was done by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) to look at the feasibility of establishing a county historic district in Greenbelt. They recommended to the city in February 1994 that county historic district status should be pursued.

Although the city must make formal request for this designation, it has referred the matter for its input to GHI, the largest property owner in what would become the historic district. GHI subsequently formed the Ad Hoc Historic District Study Committee to assist in making a recommendation to the city. In October 1997, after almost four years of study, the committee unanimously recommended that GHI endorse securing county historic district status. Since then, the GHI board has held several work sessions. The city is expected to support whatever decision is made by GHI.

Medicare + Choice Sets Up Phone Bank

The Maryland Department of Aging (MDoA) has set up a phone bank to provide telephone assistance to Medicare beneficiaries who have questions about the "Medicare + Choice" notification they received on November 2. The phone bank will be available through mid-December 1998.

"Medicare + Choice," the biggest change in Medicare since its beginning in 1965, gives beneficiaries new choices to stay enrolled in traditional Medicare Part A and B, or to enroll in new options. While new options may be available in other states, new options are not currently available in the Maryland marketplace. Whatever choice is made, beneficiaries will continue to be protected by Medicare rights and state consumer protection legislation.

For general questions about the Medicare enrollment plan options, persons should call the MDoA phone bank at 1-800-AGE-DIAL, Monday through Friday, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., or their local area agency on aging's Senior Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program (Senior HICAP).

Plan options are also available on the Internet: www.medicare.gov.

GREENDALE

alive (she once visited Greendale), Riemen had constructed a circular fountain centered with a bronze statue of two youths under an umbrella. On the fountain walls are plaques giving the history of Greendale and Roosevelt's visit in a nutshell.

Flowers Everywhere

The main feature of the village center is the flowers. They are everywhere, all along the street, in special flower beds and hanging from baskets put on light poles. Riemen says he got the idea for the lights after visiting Victoria on Vancouver Island in Canada. Each ornamental lamp post has two baskets overflowing with flowers.

Greendale residents are involved with the flowers. Riemen initiated an "Adopt a Bed" program. Residents in the original homes, lacking large yards and space for flower beds were eager to sign up to help. Dubbing these volunteers Greendale Weedout Warriors, he invited them all to a pizza dinner recently and gave them T-Shirts with their warrior title on them and the slogan "Making Greendale the best blooming place in the country."

Another project involving the residents has to do with daffodils. Riemen decided to make Greendale the daffodil capital of the world. He told the readers of the company's "Birds and Bloom" magazine that, and suggested that they could contribute to this project by donating some daffodil bulbs. Readers sent in 56,000 bulbs. Unprepared to plant them, Riemen gave them out to residents to plant, subject to three conditions: they plant them in their front yards, they send a letter thanking the bulb's donor and they return two bulbs to Riemen this fall. Riemen maintains a computerized listing of all donations and the location where the bulbs are planted for visiting readers to look at. Now a daffodil bed has been established in Dale Park next to the village center. Next spring there will be half a sun, made out of red tulips. Fifty rays will emanate from the sun, one for each state. These were planted last month with daffodil bulbs donated from the 50 states. In summer, the sun will be made out of marigolds and the rays out of red salvia. There will also be a nearby rose bed filled with last year's All American award winning rose, which was developed by a resident of next door Hales Corner.

The latest reader contest was a birdhouse contest. Over 240 birdhouses were on display at the visitor's center. These are now being given to town businesses to place outside their establishments.

Residents First

Riemen has to work with the village board. "For me, the residents come first, our visitors second," he said. He claims to never coerce the board. If they don't approve, we don't hassle, he says. Instead he comes up with another idea. He complains, however, about their slow actions claiming it takes them three years of consultations with committees to make a decision that his company can do in a matter of days.

Riemen and his wife have been residents of Greendale for 32 years. They have always had an interest in gardening and have done a lot of it at their home. The company's office facility, also in Greendale, is a garden showplace, too. He notes that office workers enjoy looking out at the colorful grounds and enjoy taking lunch breaks walking through the gardens.

A fountain next to renovated original buildings has plaques giving the history of Greendale in a nutshell. Temporary business signs were still being used when these photos were taken.

A "GREENBELT COMMUNITY"

The economic depression of the 1930's left millions of Americans looking for affordable housing. The notion of creating "Greenbelt Communities" outside major cities was part of the Roosevelt Administration's "New Deal" to provide new housing and employment. This site was one of three chosen in the nation, and the first shovel of dirt was turned in April of 1936.

Not everything is roses and daffodils in Greendale, however. Their movie theater is gone. Riemen decided not to restore it because it was filled with hazardous asbestos. Another problem with toxic material has delayed completion of the restaurant. Part of the site is the location of the old dry cleaners. In the old days, the cleaning fluid waste was allowed to drain into the yard beside the store. Now Riemen is forced to remove all of the tainted soil and have it shipped to a waste dump in Indiana. The cost of removing the unexpected toxic

WHAT IS A DENTAL ONLAY?

Onlays are essentially large fillings. The term "onlay" is used when a substantial portion of the tooth crown needs to be replaced. Onlays are used to restore teeth that are severely damaged either by decay or wear. Since they are often subjected to heavy chewing pressures, they must be made of very durable material. In most instances, porcelain is the material of choice. Porcelain onlays are chemically bonded to your tooth, become part of your tooth, and actually strengthen the existing tooth structure. It also has the advantage of matching the tooth in color, making it practically impossible to tell from your own tooth.

Onlays are considered to be a superior type of restoration when excessive wear or a difficult bite are encountered. It has greater strength than a conventional filling, yet requires less loss of tooth structure than a crown.

Based on Information Released by the Greenbelt Police Department

Assault

7500 block of Greenbelt Road, November 18, 5:56 p.m., a man told officers that another motorist pointed a handgun at him while he was driving down Greenbelt Road. The victim had been preparing to change lanes and saw the suspect's vehicle approaching from the rear. The suspect is described as a white male in his late twenties with bushy hair and a beard; he was operating an older-model beige Ford Taurus or a similar vehicle. The victim was not injured during the incident.

One placed an order, and when the clerk gave him the order, he handed the clerk a note demanding money. The clerk did as the note advised, and both men fled on foot toward the Safeway store. The men were last seen entering a white station wagon, possibly a Honda. The first man had a shirt in his hand partially covering what appeared to the victim to be a handgun. The second stood with his back to the victim during the entire incident. No one was injured. The armed suspect was a black male 20 years of age, 5'7", and thin, wearing square eyeglasses and a gray "Old Navy" sweatshirt with a hood. The second suspect was

Spellman Overpass, November 18, 12:17 p.m., two juveniles were crossing the footbridge toward old Greenbelt when a man approached them, asking the first juvenile if he had a cigarette. The victim said that he did not and continued on his way. He began to turn around and was struck in the forehead with an unknown object. The man then told both victims to lie on the ground. They complied, at which time the man took cash from both and the shoes and coat of one. The robber then fled on foot toward the 7500 block of Hanover Parkway. The first victim was treated at Doctors Community Hospital for a laceration to the forehead and released. The second victim was

African American Art At U. of Maryland

David C. Driskell

"Narratives of African American Art and Identity: the David C. Driskell Collection" is on display in the Art Gallery on the second floor of the Art and Sociology Building at the University of Maryland, College Park. The exhibit will be open free to the public through December 19. The goal of the exhibition is to facilitate an understanding and appreciation of the various ways in which shifting attitudes about race and identity are reflected in African-American art, how it is understood by audiences, and how it is collected. Curated by Dr. Juanita Holland, assistant professor of art history and archaeology, the exhibit consists of 100 paintings, sculptures and works on paper.

A professor of art at the University of Maryland since 1977, Driscoll considers himself an artist first and foremost. His work, primarily painting and collage, has been described as colorist, and reflects his Southern heritage and racial identity. As a collector he has built a large and diverse repository of African-American, African, European, and Asian art.

Calling MD Artists For Arts Celebration

The "Celebration of the Arts in Maryland" arts initiative is currently seeking visual art entries for its 1999 Works by Contemporary Maryland Artists exhibition at Government House in Annapolis. The series of three juried exhibitions is designed to recognize and celebrate Maryland artists from across the State.

"In Maryland, we are fortunate to have a great many gifted and talented artists," said First Lady Frances Hughes Glendening. "By recognizing and supporting the work of these artists, we are ensuring the arts continue to play an essential role in the quality of life our State has to offer future generations."

Artists interested in submitting their work must be Maryland residents, 18 years old or older. Work submitted must be two-dimensional work in any media; however, the work must be no larger than 60" high by 40" wide. Artists will be required to submit slides of their work for review.

Artists interested in receiving an entry form for the exhibitions should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Maryland Artists, Office of Special Projects, 300 West Preston Street, Suite 400, Baltimore, MD 21201. The deadline for submissions is Friday, December 4.

THEATRE

"Two Shows Weekly

"The theater will show two programs weekly, one running Thursday and Friday evenings, and the other Saturday and Sunday, with a Saturday matinee for children. They'll get first-run pictures five weeks after they're shown here. Prices are 30 cents for adults, 15 cents for children.

During the intense show of emotion at the Hitler-Goering newsreel, two British members of the London Cooperative Society attending the opening, W. A. Batley and I. G. Goslin, looked on with mouths agape. They indicated such demonstrations were not de rigueur in Utopian theaters.

"Little Formality

"A touch of the formal was added to the grand opening by girl ushers clad in evening gowns. But except for the first —

Greenbelt High School Seniors — and a scattered few of the more social-minded Greenbeltians who came in dinner jackets, Greenbelt did not dress for the grand opening. Even Mayor Louis Bessemer wore an ordinary business suit.

"There was a parade before the grand opening, in which the Boy Scout troop marched.

And before the theater, just as they do at a Hollywood premiere, there were flags waving under the neon. There was the American flag, and the Maryland State flag, and Greenbelt's own emblem, with a green pine tree upon a white background.

"And So to Bed

"When it was all over, Greenbelt's aftertheater crowd went to the cooperatively-owned drugstore and indulged in standardized ice cream sodas. Then they returned to their Government-owned homes, the community-owned lights went out, and so to bed."

Condolences to Lorraine Nuzzo on the death of her husband Al. They had been married 52 years.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the death of Timothy Brink, who many knew as a driver of Greenbelt's bus, The Green Connection. Mr. Brink's main job was as Crewman V, Public Works Street Maintenance Crew.

Greenbelters were also sorry to learn of the death on November 1 of Jacquelyn Moragne. Mrs. Moragne lived in Greenbelt for four years and proofread for the News Review.

A Medwin Chamber Music Scholarship was recently awarded to Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI) student Lynn Hull. A freshman, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Goodsell Hull of Lakeside Drive. She graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt High School, where she won the Orchestra Hall of Fame Award. She is majoring in chemistry at WPI.

Diane Bodner Brabston and husband Patrick welcomed a son, William Patrick, into their family June 23. He joins sister Sarah, two years old. Grandmother Mary Jane Bodner of Empire Place, spent one month in Overland Park, Kansas, this past summer awaiting Will's arrival. Another grandson, Mitchell Raymond, was born November 2 to Tricia and Robert Bodner of Ellicott City. Mitchell is their first born. The two new born cousins join cousins Brandon, Jessica, and Corbin, children of Debbie and Anthony Vara of Fairfax Station.

The Source newspaper of Shelby Township, Michigan, included an article about Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen Award to Larry Hilliard, a former resident of Shelby Township, in the November 8 issue.

Hilliard's mother, Clara, is quoted in the article as saying, "He just loves helping. Ever since he was a little kid. I don't know what I did — he was just born that way." The article also reveals that Hilliard's idea for the New Year's Eve community party he has promoted here came from a similar celebration in Birmingham, Michigan.

Megan Thomas of Greenbelt is attending Lafayette College in Easton, PA, where she is a Marquis Scholar, entitling her to join 28 others for travel to Germany and the Czech Republic for 18 days to take a distinctive Lafayette course called "Berlin, Prague, and Munich:

The Open Wall and the New Europe of the 1990s."

Tuition, airfare, room and admission fees for the course will add up to more than $2,800 for most of the students, but Thomas will pay nothing for these as a benefit of being a participant in Lafayette's Marquis Scholars program. Selected from among the college's most promising applicants, Marquis Scholars receive a special financial aid package and additional benefits, including distinctive educational experiences, cultural activities in major U.S. and Canadian cities and on campus, and mentoring programs with faculty.

"I love the program for sending me abroad!" says Thomas.

Founded in 1826, Lafayette is a small independent, coeducational college.

Ray Smith of Boxwood Village was nominated for the Volunteer of the Year Award sponsored by the Health Facilities Association of Maryland. His nomination was submitted by Peggy Callahan, activities director at the Villa Rosa Nursing Home, where he has volunteered for the past seven years. He works there several days a week on bingo, parties, outings, and other entertainment and enriching activities for the residents. He attended award ceremonies on November 6, with other volunteers nominated by nursing homes throughout Maryland. Ray didn't win the "big" award but was honored to be recognized for his volunteer work. He recommends volunteer work for the help it gives others and the personal enjoyment as well.

A Greenbelt Gardener by Rosie Rhubarb

The season is winding down and it is autumn clean up time in the garden. Raking up the leaves is the main chore, but this is also the time of year to trim the perennial flower stalks close to the ground; dump the soil out of the flower pots; pull up and store stakes; and throw out the annuals killed by the frost. The chores seem endless, but cleaning up in the late autumn means a neater looking yard during the winter.

Taking dead plants out of the garden beds means bugs and plant diseases are less likely to over winter in the yard. This decreases the chances of them attacking the plants next year.

We in Greenbelt are very fortunate because our yard debris can be picked up right out of our yards. Call Public Works for Friday pick up at 301-474-8004. Sticks should be in bags or tied in a bundle. Plant debris should be in a bag. Leaf pick up varies by neighborhood. In Greenbelt Homes leaves must be put in bags, but in other neighborhoods they are picked up at the curbside on appointed days.

Composting is another way to deal with leaves and avoids the labor of bagging them. The basic principles of composting are putting alternate layers of soil and vegetative matter in a large container. That means you have to have at least a thin layer of dirt at least every 12 inches. A pile of leaves just would not break down - it is the little things in the soil that break the leaves down into good quality soil. That is why piles of leaves dumped in city parks (unfortunately this does happen) remain piles of leaves. So remember to layer dirt in the compost.

Drought

The drought still continues and the soil is still dry. I do not remember an autumn being this dry. Usually the autumn rains allow shrubs and trees a good drink before winter

Annual Tax Institute At UMUC Dec. 5

University of Maryland University College (UMUC) is once again sponsoring the 24th Annual Maryland Federal and State Tax Institute, which is taking place at five sites throughout the state this fall. The Institute features information for CPAs, CFPs, attorneys, enrolled agents, and tax preparers about new federal and state tax law developments, including the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998. weather sets in. This year you will have to do that job. As I advised earlier, put a hose under a shrub or tree near where the edge of the branches hang over the ground (the dripline). Put the hose on a slow drip for 20 to 30 minutes. I would do this at least once a week at least on the favorite shrubs.

Greenbelt, Maryland 20770

Hello Again:

Every day we deal with different questions that people have about their vehicles. One question is: What is Preventive Maintenance? The answer is: Preventive Maintenance is a Program or Schedule. On a lighter side, it is as far as you are willing to walk when your vehicle breaks down. On a serious side, 40-60% of vehicle failure can be prevented. The balance no one has control over.

Preventive maintenance schedules are intervals at which vehicles should be serviced or inspected. Items such as oil, filters, belts, and hoses should be serviced regularly at predetermined times and mileage. For example, oil, filter, and lubrication should be done every 4 months, or every 4,000 miles whichever occurs first. A four wheel brake inspection should be performed annually. Once your maintenance schedule is implemented you will see results in dollars and in your vehicle's dependability. One might think: I only drive my vehicle 5,000 miles a year so I don't have to set a scheduled maintenance program. On the contrary, when vehicles sit around rubber components become dry-rotted and fluids become stale and chemically break down. This is as much a problem as those vehicles that receive higher mileage annually.

Till next time, think preventive maintenance.
